Aga Khan Foundation (AKF)

Eligibility: The Foundation accepts applications from students who have no other means of financing their studies, from countries where it has branches, affiliates or other AKDN agencies which can help with processing applications and interviewing applicants. At present, these are Bangladesh, India, Pakistan, Tajikistan, Kenya, Tanzania, Uganda, Madagascar, Syria, Iran, France, Portugal, the United Kingdom, the United States and Canada. Applications from students who have already started their course of study are not considered.

Selection Criteria: The main criteria for selecting award winners are: 1) excellent academic records, 2) genuine financial need, 3) admission to a reputable institution of higher learning and 4) thoughtful and coherent educational and career plans.

Financial Assistance: The Foundation assists students with tuition fees and living expenses only. The cost of travel is not included in AKF scholarships. Preference is given to those who have been able to secure some funding from alternative sources. Half of the scholarship amount is considered as a loan, which must be reimbursed with a 5% service charge. A guarantor is required to co-sign the loan agreement.

Application Procedures: Students may obtain application forms from Aga Khan Development Network representatives in their country of current residence. Forms are available as of 01 January each year and completed applications should be returned to the institution from which the form was obtained, or to the address typed on the front of the form. They should not be sent to Geneva. The deadline for submission of applications is 31 March. Applicants should be prepared to be interviewed by local Scholarship Committees about their financial situation, their academic performance, extracurricular achievements and career plans. The Aga Khan Foundation notifies all students of the outcome of their application in the first week of July.

Marjorie Deane Financial Journalism Foundation Studentship
Eligibility: The Foundation provides studentships to support successful applicants who have been accepted to do a Masters degree in economics, finance or a similar subject at a leading British university or business school. The Trustees take into account an applicant’s suitability for the course, as well as his or her plans for a subsequent career in journalism. The Trustees favour applicants who can write well and who want to be financial journalists. They also want successful applicants to produce, at the end of their course, some work that is fit for publication.
Value: Awards range from £5,000 to a maximum of £15,000 covering fees and a contribution towards living expenses.
To apply: These studentships are advertised in The Economist in March each year. These advertisements explain how to apply. Interested individuals should apply only through this process. The Foundation will not accept applications at other times of the year.
